Prayer policy discussed by school board

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — As May's controversial graduation ceremony at Lincoln County High School fades in the rearview mirror, some school officials are pondering the possibility of a district policy on prayer.

Others say how the district handled prayer during the public event was appropriate, and there's no need to push the issue further.

Board members were primed to discuss policy options with Texas-based attorney Roger Byron

Dropout age in Lincoln now set at 18

STANFORD — Lincoln County School District has successfully raised its official dropout age to 18 in time to earn a $10,000 bonus from the state.

Board members approved June 27 a second reading of policy updates that require students to remain in school until they turn 18.

Superintendent Karen Hatter said Monday she had received confirmation from the state that the school district would be receiving $10,000 for being an early adopter of the new policy.

The revised policies require all Lincoln County "students between the ages of six and 18" to "enroll and be in regular attendance" at school.

The old policy required compulsory attendance until students were 16 years old.

Director of Student Services Bruce Smith said for this coming school year and the next one, students will still be able to drop out at 16 or older if they have

Skid-steer crushes man's chest

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — A Lincoln County business owner is recovering in the hospital after a skid-steer loader fell on his chest the morning of June 26.

Pat Buckler, owner of Pat's Garden Center along U.S. 150, was pinned under the small utility vehicle after it fell down while he was working underneath it, said Jim Jarrett, a long-time friend of Buckler.

The weight of the skid-steer has been estimated at more than one and a half tons.

Jarrett said the accident could have been fatal, but Buckler was fortunate to come away with only 14 broken ribs and no internal injuries.

"Hopefully, he's on the road to recovery," he said.

Stanford EMS Deputy Director Jeff Godbey said he responded to the north Lincoln County business at about 10:30 a.m., after receiving a report that a man had been pinned.

EMS officials can't reach agreement on contract

By Ben Kleppinger

STANFORD — Stanford Ambulance Service is moving forward with a plan to begin billing for backup EMS runs after a deal could not be reached with the county-wide ambulance board.

By billing for each advanced-life-support (ALS) backup run provided, the cost to the other ambulance services in the county could be more than $93,000 every year, Stanford EMS Director Ashley Powell has estimated.

Lincoln County is unlike many Kentucky counties because it doesn't have a single, county-wide ambulance service. Instead, it has multiple, independent agencies that provide localized ambulance service and receive some funding through a county-wide ambulance board, which serves as a taxing district but does not provide ambulance service.

Backup ALS runs are provided by Stanford EMS personnel in case

A house along College Street in Hustonville is slated to become the Asylum, a new haunt for scare-seekers who previously visited the haunted castle on U.S. 127 during the Halloween season.

Haunted castle no more, but replacement in store

By Kendra Peek

HUSTONVILLE — A longtime staple on U.S. 127, the haunted castle owned by Fred and Shelia McCoy, has been torn down after the couple sold the property. However, for thrill-seekers who frequented the place, Fred McCoy says not to fear, as a new location is already in the works.

The Asylum, located at 41 College St. in Hustonville, was purchased by the McCoy's and will open this fall. McCoy plans to open the doors Sept. 27, keeping them open through Nov. 2, except on Sundays.

Currently, they are in casting mode, looking for actors to play the parts.

"We want the best this year," McCoy said. "We want to make sure we put on a good show."

Freedom of religion means freedom for non-religious, too

Government in America must be neutral among religions and neutral between religion and non-religion — at least that’s how the U.S. Supreme Court interprets the Establishment clause of the First Amendment.

But escalating conflicts involving government treatment of the nonreligious — atheists and humanists — reveal that far too many government officials are confused and conflicted about the meaning of “neutrality.”

In this month alone, an atheist monument stirred controversy in Florida, an atheist applicant for citizenship was instructed to join a church, and a congressional committee nixed atheist chaplains.

Let’s start with the first-ever atheist monument, a 1,500-pound bench erected alongside a Ten Commandments monument in front of the Bradford County Courthouse in Starke, Florida.

After a local Christian group installed the Ten Commandments monument last year, American Atheists sued to have it removed.

When county officials refused, the atheist group decided to put up a counter-monument featuring quotations from various American founders about church-state separation and passages from the Bible describing punishments for violating the Ten Commandments.

Bradford County set the stage for this confrontation in 2011 when it designated the space a “free speech forum” in order to allow a local Christian group to put up a Ten Commandments display.

But county officials soon realized that once the courthouse courtyard is open to one, it must be open to all.

American Atheists, of course, would rather have no monuments on government property. But if you can’t beat them, join them.

The tactic of putting an atheist message next to a religious message puts governments on notice that any attempt to promote religion on public property will be answered by demands for equal treatment from the non-religious.

The pushback from atheists in places like Bradford County is triggered by the fact that equal treatment for the non-religious is difficult to come by in a society where religion is often privileged.

Consider the cruel choice faced by Margaret Doughty, a British-born atheist who has lived in the U.S. for 30 years. The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services informed Doughty earlier this month that unless she joined a church her application for naturalized citizenship would be denied.

Doughty ran into this roadblock because she can’t in good conscience swear that she is willing “to take up arms to defend the United States.”

The government, it turns out, routinely grants conscientious objectors exemption from this oath — but only if they belong to a religion that opposes the bearing of arms.

This policy puts atheists and humanists seeking citizenship — but who have moral objections to war — in the unfair and unjust position of either joining a church or being denied American citizenship.

What makes this particularly galling is that the Supreme Court made clear years ago that draftees with moral and philosophical beliefs that impose a duty not to participate in war must be granted conscientious objector status on the same basis as those with traditional religious convictions (Welsh v. United States, 1970).

After letters of protest from the American Humanist Association and other groups representing atheists and humanists, the immigration service backed down this week — and Margaret Doughty is now an American citizen.

Immigration officials may finally understand the meaning of equal treatment for the non-religious. But many members of Congress have yet to learn this First-Amendment lesson.

Last week, the House Armed Services Committee voted down an amendment to the defense bill that would have authorized atheist and humanist chaplains in the military.

Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, Muslim, and Buddhist chaplains serve in all branches of the military. But a majority of the members of the Armed Services Committee apparently believe that the non-religious don’t have the same needs as the religious for counseling, support and community.

These and many other clashes involving atheists fighting for equal treatment could be avoided if government officials understood that religious liberty isn’t just for the religious.

As guaranteed by the First Amendment, religious liberty is built on a simple, but profound, principle:

A right for one is a right for all.

Grateful for those who care for the elderly

In today's times there are often news articles and television segments devoted to the horrific care elderly patients receive in nursing home facilities.

I would like to take just a moment to discuss just the opposite. Too many times the positive things are overlooked and people who devote their lives to serving others receive very little monetary and/or verbal compensation for the jobs they do.

Our family is currently spending final moments with our loved one. I simply did not want the wonderful staff who have cared for not only our ill loved one but for the entire family as well to go without a "thank you".

Those two small words seem so insignificant when compared to the job they've done so well, but it's all I can seem to come up with at the moment.

We will struggle in the days to come as our loved one leaves us, but will forever remember how much the staff went above and beyond to help us through this time.

Thank you to the staff of the Kindred Nursing Home and Rehabilitation Center of Danville, Kentucky.

Sincerely,

secuted. It was a fight carried on by people like Martin Luther King, Jr., whose push in the South helped the Civil Rights Act of 1964 become law.

Susan B. Anthony fought for years as an American citizen, and through an organization she co-founded, the National Woman Suffrage Association, to afford women the same right as men to have their voices heard. Anthony was even arrested and tried by the federal government in 1872 because she had voted in that year’s election. Her trial and subsequent work eventually led to passage of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution in 1920.

Lincoln, King and Anthony are three examples of how Americans, both well known and not so known, have worked and sacrificed to make sure the freedoms our forefathers spelled out in the Declaration of Independence remain strong and true for everyone.

Recently there have headlines spelling out allegations of infringements by the federal government by agencies like the Internal Revenue Service and the National Security Agency. Like Lincoln and Anthony before us, it is essential those in positions of leadership and citizens join together to make sure our freedoms are protected from the overreach of those who seek to take them away. It is proof positive as we celebrate this Independence Day that the fight for our rights and freedoms must go on.

Lincoln County bees successful this year, but pesticide still threatens their hives

By Katherine White
Contributing Writer

The honey bees of Lincoln county have enjoyed a banner spring! With everything from fruit blossoms to Locust trees producing nectar at once, and no late spring frost to kill the blooms, our bees have been very busy pollinating many crops while gathering pollen and nectar. Concrete evidence of their labors is nodding in countless trees and bushes in the form of apples, pears, peaches, and blackberries, to name just a few. If we don’t have too long a “dearth” (a time without nectar), 2013 will be a great year for honey production.

The strong nectar flow also encouraged the bees to swarm to make new colonies. Many beekeepers were kept busy hiving swarms from their own hives and responding to calls to pick up swarms which had settled temporarily on a tree branch or in a bush. A basketball-sized clump of bees may seem intimidating, but swarming is just the bees’ way to reproduce themselves. They are very docile as they cluster for awhile before flying off to their new home.

Once in awhile the bees choose a new home which seems good to them but is very inconvenient for us. A family in Stanford had a problem this spring with a colony in a big walnut tree so they contacted the bee club. The bees had been there a long time without any trouble, but now a big group of bees was hanging outside the hive and the bees were becoming defensive. When the beekeeper arrived, the family was not at home. But this bee project became a community event as neighbors pitched in to help with extension cords and the use of an outdoor electrical outlet to power the Bee Vac. The living curtain of bees was vacuumed up into a special screen canister in the hopes of solving the problem by simply reducing the number of bees. It worked. The colony still inhabits the tree, but without disturbing their neighbors.

Another colony of bees chose to ensconce themselves between the inner and outer walls of a shed just outside of Stanford. The outside shed wall was removed to expose the hive, and three beekeepers worked together to carefully cut out the combs. The scent of the hive will need to be eradicated and any access holes to the wall space blocked to keep bees from inhabiting the shed again.

In addition to getting bees out of where they weren’t wanted, the Lincoln bee club also helped put them where they were wanted this spring. There are two beautiful new hives on Greasy Ridge road that weren’t there last year. Two beekeepers from the club helped two “new-bees” learn how to get their bees from a temporary “nuc” or nucleus hive into their permanent homes. By the time the new frames were inspected, the two queens observed, and both frames and bees were in the hives, nervousness had given way to interest and the two beginners were on their way to becoming veterans themselves. Maybe next year they will be the ones helping someone new to bees get their start.

In spite of new swarms and new beekeepers, all is not well with the honey bees of Lincoln County. Many hives have been lost, and most of those are located near our local corn fields. Purdue University studies have shown the pesticide that treated corn seed is covered with is killing honey bees. During the seeding of corn and soybean crops talc dust containing high levels of pesticide is blown onto surrounding plants, many of which, like dandelion, are nectar or pollen sources for bees. The bees then inadvertently take the poison back to the hive.

Recently a visitor to a local apiary asked about the effects of pesticides on bees, then began to reminisce about his childhood. “I remember when the big thing was to spray DDT everywhere. Of course they said it was ‘safe.’ That was back in the day when we still had the old rural party lines. When I was growing up, there just weren’t any birds anywhere. It hit the other wildlife, too. Why, if someone saw a redbird, those party lines would be buzzing with the news. It was pretty bad.” Perhaps our Lincoln County bees could tell us something about “safe” pesticides today.

The members of the Lincoln County Beekeepers are ready to help their community. If you have a bee problem or question, you can contact the club through the County Extension office. If you’re interested in keeping bees, the club meets at the Extension office at 7:30pm on the second Monday of each month. The club will also have a both at the Lincoln County fair, complete with an observation hive. Come see if you can find the queen!

Katherine White is a local beekeeper and education director of the Lincoln County Beekeepers. She and her family, especially her daughter Ruth, have been tending and learning from honey bees for seven years.

An encouraging word Remember our precious heritage

By Howard Coop

In preparation for Independence Day, one of our more significant national holidays, I read and mulled over the Declaration of Independence, as I have for many years. I wanted to understand, as clearly as possible, what the founding fathers of this nation were thinking when they wrote that tremendously important document.

Recognized as "the best known and noblest of American state papers," that short document, containing a mere 1,364 words, had a profound effect. When written and adopted, it threw off tyranny, broke relationship with England, and established a new nation that came to be known around the world as "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Although political leaders use Marxist terms to describe a class structure to pit one group against another for political advantage, we are a nation in which all citizens "are created equal." Therefore, there are neither lords nor commoners; we are one. In recent years, we have become familiar with, and often talk about, entitlements, that is, rights we expect from the government. The founding fathers recognized that all "are endowed with" certain "unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness." These entitlements do not come from powerful governments; they come from the "Creator" of all things. Governments "are instituted" among the citizens. Those governments are powerless; they derive "their just powers from the consent of the governed." The fate of government rests in the hands of the people. The founding fathers declared that "whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive" of the ends for which it was created, it is "the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it." At a time when there is pressure to replace all references to God in the public arena, we should remember that the founding father recognized that there is a Creator, known as "nature's God." When they wrote the Declaration of Independence, they acted "with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence." As we observe Independence Day, we should remember our precious heritage given to us by those who prepared and adopted the foundational document of this nation.

Sunday morning, Stanford Church of the Nazarene was blessed by the wonderful worship service as we raised our voices to praise the Lord and learn from His Word during Sunday school and morning worship. Bro. Buford brought the message from James 2, on the subject of “Are You a Friend of God?”\On Sunday night, we gathered for Open Mic Night and rejoiced as Bro. Dennis Hasty shared the Word with us!

Come out Wednesday night for Christian Education Night. Our kids meet weekly and our adult class dubbed, “THE BOOK” club has begun a new small group study titled, “Articles of Faith,” digging deep into our shared Christian beliefs! Come join us each Wednesday night as we dig into God’s Word!

The Jail Ministry meets every Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and the Nursing Home Ministry the first Tuesday of each month at 2 p.m. For more information, or to learn how to get involved, contact the church and leave a message.

The ladies meet the first Tuesday of every month at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall.

News from Ottenheim

By Dorothy Schlappi

We see a new sign has gone up at Halls Gap for “Ottenheim Country Store,” on Hwy. 643. There is also a new salvage store on Genton Road. Groceries and other things have been cheaper for the Ottenheim area. It’s good to have stores here again!

Our prayers are for Jean Cromers, her sister passed away this past week.

Our prayers also go out to Beth and Alex Bratcher, may their health get better each day. You are in our daily thoughts and soon be back to enjoying each day with God’s grace.

Congratulations to Kelly Howard of Kocher Ridge Road here near Ottenheim area on his wonderful accomplishments. We are proud for him and his family. We have known part of his family for years. His mother, Teresa (Hoeck) Howard is the daughter of the late Joe Hoeck family who lived here in Ottenheim for years. Joe Hoeck was the son of the Frank Hoeck family from Broughtontown and attended church at St. Sylvester. We know his family is very proud of him.

The farmers are busy still setting tobacco and now combining wheat. The wheat is so pretty and yellow and the straw in windrows is a picture in itself. Seems to be a very good year for wheat. The gardens are really putting out vegetables now and they taste so good. The farmers market should open up this week in Stanford at the park, it has been moved this year.

The flowers are beautiful this year and make such pretty bouquets for church and home.

Hint: It’s easier to thinly slice meat if it is still half frozen.

Never deprive someone of hope, it may be all they have.

Remember safety when enjoying summer activities

By Anne Davis, A.P.R.N.

As soon as summer rolls around, there is nothing better to do than spend some time outdoors. In order to keep these activities as safe as possible, be sure to observe the following tips, which are recommended by the American Academy of Pediatrics:

- Sun Safety
 - To prevent their delicate skin from burning, babies under 6 months of age should not be exposed to the sun. Lightweight pants and long-sleeved shirts are the ideal apparel for infants.
 - Young children need to wear sunscreen with a minimum of SPF 15. Sunscreen

- must also be applied at least 30 minutes before going outdoors. Sunscreen should be worn daily, even when it is overcast outside.
 - In order for older children to be protected, they should wear sunscreen and reapply it every two hours. They should also have on sunglasses, a wide-brimmed hat, and cotton clothing with a tight weave.
 - Pool Safety
 - Inflatable swim aids should be avoided because they give children a false sense of security. These toys are used for fun, and they should not be a substitute for a lifejacket.

- Children should never be left alone in or around a pool. It only takes a moment of no supervision for a child to fall in a pool.
 - Keep rescue equipment and a cell phone near the pool in case of emergencies.
 - A fence that is at least four feet high should be installed around all four sides of a pool, and the gates should self-latch and self-close at a height that is out of a child's reach.
 - Playground Safety
 - Parental supervision is required to ensure that children play safely.
 - A shock-absorbing surface under and around play

- equipment should be installed.
 - Be sure to maintain all equipment to make sure that it does not have broken parts that could potentially injure a child.

- Never attach, or allow children to attach, ropes, leashes, or similar items to play equipment. These items can cause the accidental strangulation of children.

South Fork Baptist to hold note-burning service

South Fork Baptist Church would like to invite you to join us as we celebrate God's blessing on our church at a note burning service on Sunday, July 14 at 2 p.m.

God has permitted this great undertaking through many Christians who have sacrificed their time to work, monetary donations, recy-

The morning service will be followed by a meal and singing. Come join us in this day of praise to our Lord.

Brown, Smith families to hold reunions

Brown and Smith relatives and friends from the Lincoln County area are urged to mark their calendar for Saturday, Aug. 17. Two reunions will be held at the Broughtontown Community Center. The Smith Reunion will start at 1 p.m. and the Brown Reunion at 4 p.m. No reservations, food or drinks are planned, as we reminisce and share memories and family information in a very informal setting.

The 1 p.m. Smith Reunion is mainly for descendants of Joseph Leslie Smith, 1824-1869 (wife Syrena Ellis) or Peter S. Smith, 1809-1902 (wife Elizabeth Wilder) who are believed to have come by wagon train to Kentucky from Virginia through Powell Valley. They were likely close relatives, but we have been unable to confirm this. Both have many descendants in the Lincoln, Rockcastle, and Pulaski county area and beyond.

The 4 p.m. Brown Reunion will emphasize William Bryant Brown (1851-1939), his two wives (Margaret Jane Blair and Stella Bastin), and many descendants. His lineage has been traced back through Blind Jonas Brown, John Willis Brown, and Jotham Brown on back to an ancestor born 1160. Many other Browns of this area are on this same lineage and are invited to bring family tree information and participate.

PRAYER

during a working board meeting Thursday, but when Byron's pregnant wife gave birth to their child, that conversation got cancelled.

Byron works for the conservative Liberty Institute, which states as its mission "defending and restoring religious liberty in America."

Lincoln County Superintendent Karen Hatter said Byron contacted the district about the issues surrounding prayer at the May graduation and offered to advise the board on protecting students' free-speech rights.

In the lead-up to graduation this year, six seniors asked Lincoln County High School Principal Tim Godbey that prayer not be included as an official part of their graduation ceremony.

Godbey complied and did away with a traditional moment set aside during the ceremony specifically for prayer.

When graduation rolled around, Senior Class President Jonathan Hardwick prayed during his speech, receiving a standing ovation for doing so.

School officials noted prior to and after the graduation that Hardwick was acting within his First-Amendment rights and they had no intention or desire to stop him.

Hatter said Byron saw the district's lack of a specific policy on prayer as a "vulnerability."

Before Hatter called Byron for a teleconference during Thursday's board meeting, school district attorney Jonathan Baker objected, noting that Byron had "admitted he's on the fringe and ... I would be careful of any advice that he gives."

"I think how we handled it this year was just fine and it protected everybody," Baker said. "I'd hate to open up a bag of worms we wouldn't want to be opened."

Board member Tim Jackson agreed the graduation had been handled well this year, but said he believes that's because High School Principal Tim Godbey acted appropriately despite the lack of a policy to follow.

"What if you have a principal who decides to cut the mic?" Jackson asked, referencing an incident in Texas this year where a valedictorian had his microphone cut off shortly after mentioning God during graduation.

Board Chairman Jim Kelley noted while Godbey didn't have a policy to follow, he simply followed the law.

"The law is the policy," Kelley said.

Board member Tom Blankenship said he believes the school handled prayer appropriately and doesn't think the board needs to get "bogged down" in debating a prayer policy.

The board didn't get further in the debate because they were unable to talk with Byron.

Hatter said Monday she doesn't think the board will try to have another discussion with Byron.

"The board — they want to address the policy issue, but they want to use our lawyer," she said. "If they have conversations, they'll just have it with him among themselves."

INJURY

From A1

"When we arrived bystanders had already removed him out from under the Bobcat," Godbey said. "The patient appeared critical at that point and we called for a helicopter and sent him to the University of Kentucky trauma center."

Jarrett said people at the scene were able to free Buckler by putting a jack under the skid-steer and jacking it back up.

Buckler passed out during the ordeal, but had regained consciousness by the time EMS personnel arrived, Godbey said.

Jarrett said Buckler was still in the hospital Monday, where he was battling through build-up in his lungs from the broken ribs. The recovery may take a while, but Buckler has been able to get up and move around his hospital room some, he added.

"I think he's going to be alright, but there's no guarantees on that sort of thing," Jarret said. "He'll be in there a while."

ALS

patients need more than the basic life support many other ambulance services in the county offer.

Powell approached the county-wide board in June, asking for an additional $55,000 on top of the $25,000 the county board had been paying Stanford annually to provide ALS backup runs. Under the $25,000 contract, Stanford made ALS backup runs for the other ambulance services without billing them.

Powell cited statistics showing his ambulance service is making only about a tenth of what it used to for providing the backup runs: In 2001, Stanford EMS netted $189 per run, but over the past 12 months it has only netted an estimated $19.40 per run.

That amount is not enough for Stanford EMS to continue offering the service, Powell said. And with the McKinney Ambulance Service currently out-of-commission, Stanford would likely only see a net of about $5.51 per run in the next 12 months, he added.

Powell proposed the $55,000 increase as an alternative to Stanford offering ALS backup-runs on its own and billing for them individually. That change would be more costly to the county on the whole, Powell argued.

Powell estimated if Stanford had to begin billing for ALS backup-runs, it would negatively affect the bottom lines of the other ambulance boards in the following amounts annually:

- East End/Crab Orchard Ambulance Service would lose an estimated $30,000;
- West End Ambulance Service would lose an estimated $19,500;
- Waynesburg Ambulance Service would lose an estimated $25,500; and
- whoever covers the area previously served by the currently-out-of-commission McKinney Ambulance Service would lose an estimated $18,750.

Powell said last week that the county-wide ambulance board made a counter-offer of an extra $15,000 at a meeting on June 24.

At a special meeting of the Stanford Ambulance Board June 27, board members seemed unimpressed with the offer. Many agreed with the sentiment expressed that the county board had "low-balled" the Stanford board. The Stanford board decided to reject a new contract with the county and voted to offer individual contracts to each of the other ambulance services in Lincoln County.

Powell said Monday he had not received official responses from the county-wide board or the other ambulance services. The other services will have to bring the proposed contracts before their own boards in order to make a decision, he said.

Lincoln County Ambulance Board Chairman Jerry Shelton could not be reached for comment.

parental permission.

In the 2015-2016 school year, attendance will be compulsory for all students under 18 and parents will not be able to give permission to drop out, Smith said.

The Kentucky General Assembly passed legislation this year allowing districts to up their drop-out age to 18. If 55 percent of the state's districts — a total of 95 districts — adopt an 18-year-old dropout age, the remaining districts will be required to do so as well within four years.

In order to encourage school districts to adopt the new dropout age, the Kentucky Department of Education offered $10,000 to early adopters.

In order to make sure Lincoln County got in under the wire for the bonus, Hatter told board members she would need to send proof of the new policy to the KDE as soon as possible after the vote.

"I can apply for that grant tomorrow if we approve this today," she said.

Board Chairman Jim Kelley estimated about 50 school districts had already upped their dropout ages before Lincoln County.

Hatter said the district has not decided what exactly it will do with the $10,000 yet, but it will probably go toward strengthening programs the district uses to help at-risk students.

What began 19 years ago with the fire department, when McCoy was then the chief, has blossomed into thousands of dollars in props and animatronics.

"We realized this was something we just enjoyed doing," McCoy said.

Eventually, he would like to move to the Gatlinburg, Tenn., area and open a haunted house there.

For now, though, McCoy will continue in this region but said he wants to try to "change it year after year."

"We have customers who have been here for 19 years," McCoy said, noting he may not know all of their names but sees their faces every season. For those people, especially, the McCoy's strive to keep things changing.

With their new location, there also is potential to use some of the wooded area behind the building.

The McCoy's also conducted concealed carry classes on the property on U.S. 127. Those also have moved to the new location. However, classes probably won't resume again until after the Halloween season ends.

CROWNING GLORY GOEN, NEWMAN WIN LINCOLN CO. FAIR TITLES

By Nancy Leedy

STANFORD – A brief rain early in the evening dampened the first full night of activity at the Lincoln County Fair, but that did not keep the event from getting off to a royal start.

Hailey Victoria Goen and Allison Diane Newman shared the winner's spotlight Monday evening in the Teddy Gilbert Pageant Pavilion as Goen was crowned Miss Lincoln County Fair and Newman won the Miss Lincoln County title.

As has been the tradition since 1997, the Lincoln Fair Board has opened the Miss Lincoln County Fair pageant up to contestants from across the state while a second title, Miss Lincoln County, could only be won by a Lincoln County resident.

Goen, 20, the daughter of Mike and Jennifer Goen of Nicholasville, was selected out of a field of 10 contestants Monday night to wear the title of Miss Lincoln County Fair.

Newman, 18, the daughter of Ramona Wall of Stanford and Donnie Newman, who also stands just 5'3", used her grace and poise onstage and her communicative skills during the prepageant off-stage interview to catch the attention of the judges.

The green-eyed brunette, who also finished as first runner-up in the overall competition, was chosen out of four Lincoln County participants to wear the local title.

As Miss Lincoln County Fair, Goen was awarded a $100 cash award, silver, a crown pin, flowers, sash and a crown. She also receives $50 plus room expense for when she represents Lincoln County at the annual Miss Kentucky County Fair contest held in January. In addition to the title, Goen was also the recipient of one of the night's preliminary awards being selected by the judges to receive the Evening Gown Award for her choice of formal attire.

Goen, who was crowned by the 2012 Miss Lincoln County Fair Teen Briana Denny, is currently a student at Georgetown College where she is pursuing a career in sports marketing. Her ambition is to balance a fulfilling career all while being family oriented. She lists varsity cheerleading for Georgetown College and anything involving horses as her favorite hobbies. When asked what was an interesting fact about herself, Goen said it was that she's been on two mission trips to Jamaica.

Newman will be a sophomore at Western Kentucky University this fall. She is pursuing a degree in secondary family and consumer sciences education with plans to become a high school teacher. She also plans to get a masters in exceptional education. Reading, cooking, crafting, fashion design and working out all rank high in Newman's list of hobbies. As for an interesting fact about herself, Newman said that she was very passionate about blood and organ donorship. She has donated over a gallon of blood and is a registered organ donor.

Newman, who was also crowned by Denny, received a $150 cash award, $50 expenses to State Fair, a crown pin, flowers, sash and crown. She will represent Lincoln County on the opening day of the Kentucky State Fair in August. As the overall first runner-up, Newman received a $60 cash prize and silver.

Both Goen and Newman will reign over the Lincoln County Fair over the remainder of the week, participating in various activities at the fair.

Second runner-up in the contest was Savannah Stevens. Stevens, 16, and a student at Boyle County High School, received $40 and silver for being named second runner-up. She is the daughter

Preventing pink eye

Pinkeye is a problem for producers because it lowers the value of feeder calves, and cows often have limited sight in affected eyes. Research in Kentucky indicated that calves with pinkeye weighed 35 to 40 lbs. less than their unaffected cohorts. That can be very costly in lost pounds to sell and that impacts beef production profitability greatly. Prevention is the key to minimizing the impact of pinkeye.

Pinkeye is an infection of the conjunctiva or connective tissue surrounding the eye and the cornea. It is caused by the moraxella bovis bacteria. This bacterium is harbored in the tear ducts of infected cows. Cows serve as a reservoir of the bacteria even after the infection has healed on its own. Face flies are the vector that carries the bacteria from infected cattle to uninfected cattle. As the flies feed, they create small scratches on the surface of the eye. This creates a point of entry for any bacteria that they might be carrying in their mouth parts or salivary glands. If they are carrying the bovis bacteria then pinkeye can start.

Preventing pinkeye focuses on three main areas: 1) reducing eye irritation, 2) face fly control and 3) nutrition. Another possible area is vaccination. A full pinkeye prevention program requires management of all three or four areas.

Eye irritation in beef cows and calves is a result of environmental factors. The principal eye irritant is seed heads, grass stems and weeds in pastures. Overgrown pastures force cattle to push their heads deep into the forage to select the more desirable growth. Seed heads and stems can cause physical abrasion to the eye as they do that resulting in an opportunity for bacterial infection. When pastures are mowed or clipped they should be clipped low enough so cut stems are four inches or less in height. Simply removing the seed heads and leaving the stems may increase eye irritation. A combination of proper grazing management and clipping of pastures will decrease cattle eye injuries.

The key management strategy is good fly control. Fly tags are very effective for horn flies but less effective for face flies. In addition to fly tags, producers should use dust bags or face bullets. Bags and bullets can be located near mineral feeders. Sprays are also an effective control method, but require more labor and frequent application. Because face flies are not blood sucking flies, they are not easily killed by systemic or pour-on type fly control products. If you are depending on mineral with the fly control insecticide, you are not getting fly control good enough to prevent pinkeye. You need to add another fly control method to your program. Most fly control products should first be applied in early June. Fly control products should be rotated annually, and products in fly tags and dust-bags should be different.

Trace minerals are the nutrient most likely to be deficient in cows and calves grazing spring and summer pastures. Specifically, selenium (Se) and copper (Cu) are very deficient in summer grazed pasture. Although these minerals will not prevent pinkeye, they are important minerals involved in immune function. Improved immune function will help cattle fight all infections including pinkeye. Vitamin A also helps reduce pinkeye problems as it promotes better eye healthy for cattle. Keep a good free choice mineral with vitamins out to your cattle all the time.

Although several pink-eye vaccines are available, none of the vaccines provide complete protection against pinkeye. Producer satisfaction with vaccination programs is highly variable. Vaccination programs appear to be of most benefit in herds that have a high incidence of pink-eye. Producers should consult their veterinarian when considering a pink-eye vaccination program.

Comer earns national honor

Agriculture Commissioner James Comer has been awarded National Friend of Extension honors by the cooperative extension organization Epsilon Sigma Phi.

“I have had a close relationship with Extension for most of my life,” Commissioner Comer said. “I got to know about Extension when I was in 4-H. As a farmer, I utilize Extension services in my own operation back home in Monroe County. As a legislator and as ag commissioner, I have always worked with Extension to strengthen Kentucky agriculture. I am deeply honored to receive this award.”

Comer will accept the award at the National Extension Agents Galaxy Conference in Pittsburgh, Pa., in September. He is one of four 2013 National Friend of Extension recipients and the only one of the four who is an elected official.

The Kentucky chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi, made up of Kentucky county Extension agents, nominated Comer for the award. In its nomination, the chapter cited the following:

•Comer helped Kentucky 4-H (as well as Kentucky FFA and Kentucky Proud) find new revenue by encouraging farmers to make voluntary $10 donations when they renew their farm license plates. Early in his first year in office, Comer reached an agreement with Kentucky 4-H and Kentucky FFA to divide proceeds from the voluntary farm plate donations equally among those organizations and Kentucky Proud. The voluntary donations generated $121,708.64 for each organization in 2012, and Comer expects revenue from the donations to exceed that level this year.

•Comer serves on the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board, the Kentucky State Fair Board, the North American International Livestock Exposition board, and numerous other agriculture-related boards.

•As a state representative, Comer helped secure funding for a career ladder incentive program for county agents; supported the annual Mammoth Cave Legislative Appreciation Program; was influential in securing $2 million for infrastructure improvements for Kentucky’s four 4-H camps; and played a significant role in starting the “4-H: A Capitol Experience” program that enables 4-H members to visit the state Capitol and meet their legislators.

•Comer has served on his county Extension council and local cattlemen’s association and assisted with local livestock shows.

•Comer was active in the 4-H communications project and 4-H beef project as a youth.

“[Comer] has had a tremendous impact on Kentucky agriculture and the Cooperative Extension Service,” the chapter wrote in its nomination.

Based in Twin Falls, Idaho, Epsilon Sigma Phi is dedicated to fostering standards of excellence in the Extension system and developing the Extension profession and professional.

Foreign buyers notification

John W. McCauley, USDA Farm Service Agency Kentucky State Executive Director reminds producers that the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act (AFIDA) requires all foreign owners of U.S. agricultural land to report their holdings to the Secretary of Agriculture. The Farm Service Agency administers this program for USDA.

All individuals who are not U.S. citizens, and have purchased or sold agricultural land in the county are required to report the transaction to FSA within 90 days of the closing. Failure to submit the AFIDA form (FSA-153) could result in civil penalties of up to 25 percent of the fair market value of the property. County government offices, realtors, attorneys and others involved in real estate transactions are reminded to notify foreign investors of these reporting requirements.

Gillum, McClanahan receive awards

Tyler Gillum and Matthew McClanahan, the sons of J.J. Bryant, formerly of Stanford, recently won achievement and character awards at their respective schools.

Tyler, a senior at Eastern Kentucky University, won the Outstanding Senior Award for the Theta Chi Fraternity. He is studying to become a high school history teacher. Tyler's father and stepmother are Doug and Stephanie Croushorn Gillum, formerly of Stanford.

Matthew, who will be a freshman this fall, won the Adaptability Character award at Southern Middle School in Somerset. Matthew, whose dad and stepmother are Jess and Lou McClanahan of Brodhead, will be attending Southwestern High School.

Tyler and Matthew are the grandsons of Larry Bryant, great-grandsons of Thelma Bryant and the late Charlie Bryant and nephews of Bev Ballew, all of Stanford. They are also the grandsons of Dianne Clark and nephews of Cheryl Clark Rachford, both formerly of Crab Orchard and Stanford, and great nephews of Sheryll and Mike Goodwin of Stanford. Their great-grandmother was the late Jen Howard.

Financial Aid Tip: Private loans bridge gap between college costs, student aid

Many sources of financial aid are available to help college-bound students pay higher education expenses, including federal and state grants, scholarships and Federal Stafford and PLUS Loans. In addition, merit-based scholarships and need-based grants are often available at the local level, according to the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

All of these programs may help ease the burden of paying for college. However, sometimes these sources are not enough to cover all the costs. When that happens, parents and students may take advantage of private student loans, also called alternative loans.

The interest rate on private loans will largely depend on the borrower's credit rating, so students and parents may have to pay higher interest rates than they would on federal student loans. In addition, many lenders require students to have a cosigner, and some require the college to certify that the student needs the loan.

Students and parents are encouraged to do research before committing to any loan. They should compare the loans offered by various lenders to find the best possible deal.

KHEAA is the state agency that administers Kentucky's student aid programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES).

To find links to other useful education websites, go to www.gotocollege.ky.gov. For more information about Kentucky scholarships and grants, visit www.kheaa.com; write KHEAA, P.O. Box 798, Frankfort, KY 40602; or call 800-928-8926, ext. 6-7372.
